also favorites, and foreign tattoo workers have made a careful study of these designs, for which there is such demand. No matter how much tattoo work sailor has on his body, there is invariably some design suggesting his native country, and these are usually displayed in a prominent place.

Certain Japanese and Chinese tattoo workers of the far East have perfected designs of Chinese women that are popular, but their drawings of the American woman are invariably bad. The workers do not seem to catch the facial expression of the American woman and the faces they draw are hideous.

Tatooing is a regular business at almost every seaport. As soon as the boats come to rest in the harbor several of the artists go aboard immediately and spend every day there until the ship salls again. The sallors line up like men in a barber shop and wait their turn to be "done."

Charges of the Tattoo Workers.

The tattoo worker displays his designs at so much each and the sailors pick their choice. When certain elaborate designs are to be worked the sailor goes ashore with the tattoo worker and remains with him until the work is com-worker immediately and have design after design drawn on their fair skin. Their taste runs particularly to butterflies and small birds, although many of them are fond of chameleons and lizards. Frequently the same tattoo worker who has been employed by the sailors of a ship performs the same work of art for one of the officer's wives. The desire for the colored designs seems to follow the ship and it seizes men and women allke.

One on my other arm was put on down in the West Indies, and each mark I have brings back to mind happenings in various ports of the country just as a collection of pictures and souvenirs affects other persons. That is almost exclusively the reason why sailors have tattoo marks on their bodies."

The man had designs worked on his arms and breast that were worth $300. Put on one at a time by men from all parts of the world, he had a collection that would shadow the collection of any relic-hunter. On one arm there was a design of the Chinese dragon which reached from the wrist to above the elbow, and was worked out in great detail in red and blue ink. On his breast were designs of serpents, a picture of a Japanese woman, and numerous but-terflies and blreds.

Mastic, or mastica, is the gift to the American republic from the Isles of Greece. It is a drink with a proud im-eage that runs back to the times of Pericles, Aspasia, Sophocies, and Anaxagoras. It is even the tradition that it who seeks employment, and gradually they acquire and keep acquiring a varied collection of work. Some sailors have their bodies almost covered with designs that have taken weeks in the making, and have undergone the most severe pain in order to "show up" as good a collection as some other Jack Tar. The designs run from snakes and anchors to pictures of the crucifixion, the last of which seems to be a particular favorite with tattoo workers of some Catholic countries.

Snake Coiled About His Body.

In spite of the fact that the ink is introduced far under the skin and produces wounds that take weeks in healing, it is said that few serious results are experienced. Historians are, therefore, leaning to the theory that the famous charge of the Athenians, which struck the Persians like a boil of ravaging fury, had its inspiration in soul-burning draughts of the historical progenitor of mastic. According to modern police records, one American full of mastic is a storm centre of desolation; an army loaded with the juicy would be a cyclone of disaster.

Many immigrants from the Danube valley, Bulgarians, Roumanians, Servians, Siavs, Bosnians, Russian Jews, etc., have invaded the Northwest, and as a result the customs authorities have made the acquaintance of "tirnovka," a prune brandy. The valley of the Danube is probably the original home of the prune and plum. Not only do they grow wild, but what is more, nowhere in Europe do they reach such perfection, and despite the competition of France and California, Bosnia and Servia still furnish the greater part of the world's prune supply. Prunes and pigs are the two chief sources of wealth of these Balkan states, for after the people have sold all the prunes they can for export they teed the rest to the pigs or distil them into prune brandy.

Cherry and Plum Cordials.

Cherry and Plum Cordials.

Cherries and plums were long ago utilized for liquor by the people of Europe. Two famous liqueurs that are now extensively consumed here were invented in widely separated countries. Maraschino was first made in commercial quantities at the little town of Zara, in Dalmatia, the makers having obtained the secret from the neighboring Slavs of Bosnia. It was originally distilled from the fine, large Marasca cherry, and after the distillation the seeds of the cherries were cracked and the liqueur flavored with the pits. The Germans, who doubtless also learned the art of making light brandles of plums and cherries from their neighbor Slavs, in Poland and Bohemia, invented the liqueur known as kirchen.

Flive years more of unremitting toll, and another $3,500,000 to be spent—this is the expectation before the greatest remains with him until the work is completed. The worker charges so much a day for his labor, and often occupies a week in the drawing of something particularly large. The men are experts and use the best ink obtainable, so that the sailors have little to fear from the consequences of the operation.

It is an interesting fact that women display the same penchant for tattoofing as men. There are many wives of officers and yacht owners who put up in foreign ports and send for a tattoo worker immediately and have design after design drawn on their fair skin.

CURIOUS AND USELESS STATIS-TICS.

According to some curious investigations conducted by English scientists, eldest sons tend to be criminals and youngest sons paupers. A great many thousand school children and many family histories have been examined to yield these results. First-born children were found to be, as a rule, taller and heavier, with greater ability and endurance than the others. This is in accordance with the popular feeling in many countries that the oldest child is superior to the others and deserving of special privileges. It is a well established fact that among men of genius an undue proportion are eldest sons.—Delending their equipment and all possible aid.

To this remarkable work is devoted nearly $700,000 a year—this year's appropriation amounts to $651,000. It is the income from an endowment fund set apart for the purpose by Andrew Carnegle.

What good may come of it all? That question is answered best by showing the lines of research along which the scientists are plodding and revealing the progress already made.

No more extraordinary series of investigations for the benefit of health, commerce, science, and art were ever undertaken, and it is expected that mankind will profit to a vastly greater extent than is even indicated by the $1,000,000 cost of the great research—Pittsburg Dispatch.
